Ranked Among Great Men.

The capital, which was stunned with announcement of Borah's critical condition Thursday morning, mourned the passing of a man whose death leaves a mighty gap in the front ranks of great men.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, with whom he disagreed vigorously on foreign policy, were among the first to pay tribute to his fighting spirit and fearlessness. Mr. Roose-

Delaware Blaze Destroys Half Block In Business District.

DELAWARE — (NS) — Fire, which destroyed a half of a block in the downtown Delaware business district and for a time threatened the entire area, was brought under control early today by firemen who fought the blaze in near zero temperatures.

Destroyed was the building housing the Humphries Motor Sales. About 20 automobiles in the building also went up in the flames.

The entire Delaware fire department and several volunteers kept the blaze from spreading across alleys to other structures. Firemen made no attempt to save the blazing building, confining their efforts to preventing the fire to spread.

Damage was estimated at somewhere between $25,000 and $50,000

MAKES FINDINGS AGAINST CITY

Examiner's Audit Criticizes Gasoline Purchases, Lauds Kelley.

Findings for recovery, totaling $804.10, more than half of which has been either paid or adjusted, was returned in a report of an audit of Mansfield municipal offices, released today by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

The audit which covers the period from Sept. 1, 1937 to Nov. 19, 1938, cites two former employes for failure to properly record public funds trusted to their care, and criticizes the city board of control for the purchase of motor fuel for city cars at retail prices.

The examination of the city departments was made by State Examiner Elmer A. Zook, whose only comment of any length concerning the operations of municipal government was highly complimentary to City Auditor Paul L. Kelley.

It said in part: "We believe the city's excellent financial condition throughout past years, when other cities of similar size were experiencing extreme difficulties, is in no small part due to Mr. Kelley's knowledge of municipal financing."

Of the total findings for recovery, an additional amount of $356.95, part of which has been repaid, was returned against form-

BRICKER SETS FEB. 6 AND 27 FOR ELECTIONS

Governor Calls For Vote In 17th and 22nd Districts To Fill Vacancies.

WOLFE SENDS PROTEST

Auditor Complains County Can 'Ill Afford $6,000 Expense Now' For Elections.

Gov. John W. Bricker today set Feb. 6 for special primaries and Feb. 27 for special elections to fill congressional vacancies in the 17th and 22nd districts, dispatches from Columbus said.

Announcement of the special election dates came shortly after County Auditor Norman L Wolfe sent a protest to the governor against the special elections because of the cost they will involve.

In a letter to the governor, Wolfe said: "As fiscal officer of Richland county I respectfully ask that you give consideration to the expense of an election to the county which has made no appropriation for it."

The auditor pointed out that the elections will cost Richland county from $6,000 to $7,000 which the "county can ill afford to pay when relief bills are mounting and we are trying to meet our operating costs."

Says No Funds Set Up.

He said the county has a big general election to finance in the fall and that additional election expense now will burden the county since there is no provision for it in the 1940 appropriation

It was estimated by the secretary of state that the elections in the 17th district which includes Richland and five other counties will cost about $40,000.

The county election board had not been informed of the special election call at noon today and Clerk A. F. Porter said he was unable to announce a date for closing the registration lists.

Ordinarily the registration closes 28 days before an election, but Drink-Crazed Policeman Slays Sergeant's Wife at Home.

CHELSEA, Mass. —(AP)— Two persons were killed and a schoolgirl was perhaps fatally wounded today during a gun duel between a drink-crazed patrolman and his superior.

Patrolman John W. Price, 42, was killed by Sergeant Herbert J Hannabury, 45, after he had slain Hannabury's wife, Helen, 44, and wounded a 14-year-old daughter, Virginia Hannabury, in the chest. The girl was reported near death at a hospital.

Lieut. Cornelius Duggan said that Price, who had been in trouble repeatedly during his 12 years on the Chelsea police force, was reprimanded at midnight for drinking.

'Super-Man' Bathes In Snow at 5-Below

The mercury stood at five below zero yesterday afternoon at North Lake park when Harry H. Wright, 61-year-old Mansfield railroad crossing watchman, sat down on a pile of snow on the windswept lake, clad only in swimming trunks He did it for a heavily-clothed, shivering, News-Journal camera man just to prove that he has really toughened himself against the elements To establish even more proof, Wright took a big bite from an ice cream cone

Cold? Here's Man, 61, Who Walks Barefooted on Ice

Mansfielder Takes Daily Strolls With Chest, Feet and Arms Bared to Sub-Zero Temperatures.

A lot of Mansfielders puffing under layers of extra clothing piled on to meet the frigid 15-below zero blasts, took one look at Harry H Wright, 61-year-old railroad employe, yesterday and decided they were just a bunch of panty-waists.

Many of them stared in amazement and some even poked their heads out of closely drawn up overcoat collars long enough to take a second look. The spectacle made some of them shudder and shiver all the more, and there were others who thought: "Well maybe it's not so darn cold after all!"

Bareheaded and clad only in a thin cotton shirt, summery pants and a pair of shoes, Wright stepped briskly down Main street, letting the stinging cold bite at his bare chest. His shirt was unbuttoned to the waist, his sleeves rolled up to the elbows.

He wore no socks and now and then a gust of wind blew powdery snow up his trouser legs. There was nothing underneath when, for most everyone else, a heavy pair of red flannels wouldn't have been uncomfortable.

It seemed the frosty, bone-chilling air was just invigorating enough to put a spring in Wright's step as he strolled down the street. He gave shivering, gawking pedestrians a warm smile and a friendly wave with his hand.

Says It's Way To Health.

The excitement he created on his three trips down town from his home at 163 Penn avenue in yesterday's pneumonia-breeding weather couldn't have been greater if Sally Rand had defied King Winter's wrath by walking Main street fanning, instead of shielding herself with her ostrich plumes

Wright's partial "back to nature" attire is really a serious undertaking to him. It's the way to health for anyone, even a man of 61, he says.

"I get kidded a lot, but the three years I have been leaving my body open to the air, winter or summer, have left me feeling

Editor Pictures Democracy, Discipline And Devotion to Idea as U. S. Keynotes

Make Them Work and You Solve Our Troubles, Patterson Says.

Democracy, discipline and devotion to an idea or ideal—they're the three things that matter"

That was Grove Patterson's anaylsis of the American scene as the Toledo editor addressed more than 350 at the annual dinner meeting of the Manufacturers association at the Mansfield-Leland hotel last night

The three Ds he contended should be "the fundamentals of our thinking and the background of our philosophy."

"If we can solve these three things, we have reached a solution for most of our troubles," Patterson said.

He admitted that democracy is not the most efficient form of government "perhaps it is the least efficient" and then went on to paint the background of what he considers is the essence of democracy.

In doing this he went somewhat into detail on the totalitarian form of government, of the difference between communism and fascism

The totalitarian government can do overnight what would take us here six months," he said. "There the state is supreme . . . Every citizen of the Soviet Union is a prisoner He can't cross a border, he can' do virtually nothing without the state's approval"

Patterson pointed out that fascism is simply seizure of the government by a central body while communism is complete government control of the state. "There isn't anything to choose between the two," he added

Thrice a traveler in Russia, Patterson said his return to this country brought back memories of the copybook sentence that was emphasized so strongly in his schooldays—

FLAMES KILL 7 AS HOMES BURN

4 Ohioans Die, 3 Injured When Fire Breaks Out; 3 Fatally Burned In Michigan.

(By Associated Press)

Four persons were killed and three were injured in two Ohio fires early today, while three burned to death in a small rural home near Pontiac, Mich.

Two children perished in a fire that swept a small country home at Wintersville, five miles west of Steubenville. They were Virginia Lee Hess, 7, and her three-year-old brother, Owen James.

Their mother, Mrs. O. J. Hess, took four children to safety but said the swift spread of flames prevented her returning for the two others.

Mrs Hess and the rescued children, wearing only light night clothing and barefooted, walked a quarter mile in snow to the home of a neighbor.

Fire started by an overheated bedroom stove swept through a frame home and grocery building in Middletown, killing a 19-year-old girl and her 3-year-old sister and injuring three other members of the family

Three persons burned to death in a fire which destroyed a small rural home in Waterford township near Pontiac Mich Lewis Stegner, 33 his wife, Alice, 24, and their 14-months old son, Phillip, lost their lives.

Township Trustees Delay Election Due to Small Attendance.

Because of small attendance at last night's session of the Richland County Association of Township Trustees and Clerks, the organization postponed its election of officers until the annual trustees' road meeting late in February

Principal speaker at the session last night was Joe R. Thomas of Hayesville state president of township trustees and clerks who told the township officials about the state convention scheduled for Jan. 25 to 27 in Columbus.

Temperature at 7 as City Gets 'Slight Relief'

Weatherman Promises Frigid Week-End; 5 Below Is Night's Low; 100 Deaths In Nation Attributed to Arctic Blast; Relief Demands Soar.

Winter laxed its frigid grip slightly in Ohio today as temperatures moved above zero, but the relief will be only temporary, the weatherman said, with continued cold due Sunday.

After dropping to 15 degrees below zero in Mansfield yesterday, the mercury registered five below today and by noon it had climbed to seven above.

A light snow, driven by a brisk west wind, created blizzard conditions in the Mansfield area this morning. Light snow was expected to follow the temperature rise in most of Ohio.

The forecasters say little chance for appreciable relief from the frigid wave before Monday, predicting cloudy and continued cold weather tonight and Sunday.

Readings of zero and slightly above were reported from all of the state today as the peak of the three-day cold wave moved into the eastern states, sending the mercury down to new lows for the winter.

Hayesville, east of Mansfield, Akron, and Cambridge reported readings of one above today. Cleveland and Columbus had four above, and Cincinnati eight above.

The cold was directly responsible for at least 100 deaths in the nation, including 20 from exposure. Relief demands increased sharply over Ohio as suffering indigent families sought food, fuel and clothing.

Workers at the Richland county relief office said requests for help had shown a marked increase in the past week and every effort was being made to give some help to all of the deserving applicants.

Mayor William J. Locke said Mansfield faces a fire hazard as a result of the continued cold since "eight out of nine of the city's fire hydrants have been frozen."

Thaw Out Fire Hydrants.

Fire Chief Charles Seeburger said 50 hydrants in the downtown area were inspected yesterday and six were thawed out. Fire department employes were still working on the frozen hydrants today.

The extreme cold yesterday burst more than 125 water meters in the city, water department employes said, and workers were replacing them today.

As the cold wave settled over the eastern and southern states today, record low marks were reported in the south. It was 27 above zero at Jacksonville, Fla., and students at Louisiana State university skated on the campus for the first time.

Halt Retreat to Launch Desperate Effort to Throw Finns Back.

(By International News Service)

HELSINKI—At bay, a Russian division of 20,000 men turned on the Finns today in a desperate battle for survival in the Salla sector.

Its retreat eastward all but cut off, the division threw up hastily-constructed fortifications along a line drawn through Markajaervi, 45 miles inside Finland, and struggled to pry apart the jaws of two throttling Finnish columns.

For the last two days the Russians have been retreating swiftly in temperatures that plummeted to 68 degrees below zero. It appeared for a time that they might escape the Finnish trap, but apparently today their commanders found it necessary to turn and make a standing fight.

On other fronts relative quiet prevailed.

Congress Would O. K. Embargo on Japan, Pittman Says

SENATOR SAYS SUPPORT FOR BILL GROWING

Claims Approval Possible If Administration Decides Not To Oppose Measure.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Chairman Key Pittman, (D., Nev.,) of the senate foreign relations committee predicted today that congress, in its present temper, would approve an embargo against Japan "unless the administration opposes it."

He said the congressional sentiment for the embargo was steadily increasing despite a "barrage of Japanese propaganda." He added that if the administration decided to oppose the embargo, it would probably die.

Pittman said he had no communication from the state department as to its attitude. He said he had not discussed an embargo with any of the executive departments.

Three embargo bills are pending before the senate foreign relations committee, and four in the house foreign affairs committee. Pittman said he would ask the senate committee to begin a study of them as soon as the United States treaty of commerce and friendship with Japan expires on Jan. 26.

Bans War Materials.

Pittman's own bill, the one most likely to be acted on, would authorize the imposition of an embargo on shipments of war materials, scrap iron, gasoline, and allied products to Japan, if the president should find American rights are being discriminated against in China.

Pittman said that in order to recognize American rights in China, Japan would be forced to abandon her insistence upon a "new order" in Asia. Japan has demanded that western powers recognize her "special position" in China, which would require the abandonment of the "open door" in China for nations of the western world, including the United States.

"My bill," Pittman said, "Does not establish a statutory embargo, which would, of course, be unwise. It merely authorizes the president to impose an embargo as long as our rights in China are being disregarded.

2 Hurt, 100 Shaken As Trains Collide Near Cleveland

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Two persons were hospitalied and more than 100 shaken up or slightly injured last night as two crack New York Central passenger trains collided at Wickliffe, 15 miles northeast of here.

The second section of the eastbound Southwestern limited crashed into the rear of the first section of the Commodore Vanderbilt at 10 p. m. (EST) as the Vanderbilt stopped to inspect "sticking brakes." A. E. Lloyd, assistant general manager for the road here, said the crash broke couplers on the Vanderbilt, but caused little other damage.

August Austin, 24, of Chicago, dining car employe, suffered internal and back injuries, and Ellsworth Harris, 21, of Springfield, O., a U. S. Army private, shoulder injuries.

Several other persons were treated at the scene and 100 passengers were examined and given aid at the Cleveland terminal before boarding other trains

The Vanderbilt was bound for Boston and the limited for New York. The wreck held up the Century and other passenger trains about 40 minutes.

DISCUSSES 'LIFE'

Lesson-Sermon to be Read Sunday at Scientist Church.

"Life," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Church of Christ, Scientist, Sunday.

The Golden Text is "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son" (I John 5:11).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, neither for the body, what ye shall put on. . . . The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment" (Luke 12:22, 23).

The sub-zero weather yesterday didn't stop Deputy County Auditor Arthur S. Beck, one of the city's most determined hikers. Donning bright red ear tabs Beck hiked more than a mile to the courthouse from his home in Woodland. "I didn't get very cold and I feel better afterward," he commented.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Markson of Brainard, Minn., who are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Williams, West Third street, consider this weather just "mild." In fact, good fishing weather. The Marksons were ice fishing last Sunday when the thermometers in northern Minnesota stood at 20 below. They sat in their tiny fishing cabin, over two feet of solid ice. The inside of the cabin is dark so that they can see to the bottom of the lake through the hole cut in the floor of the cabin and through the thick ice. Fishing with a line is prohibited so they use spears and it takes some considerable skill and dexterity to spear a fish as he flashes by at least two feet below the cabin floor. But they don't get very cold because there is a tiny stove in the cabin, and besides it isn't really cold up there until it hits 40 below.

Christmas comes only once a year, but to Mrs. Avis Reed of the Senior high school faculty and advisor of the January graduating class, the holiday came again yesterday, when she was presented with a gift by the class in appreciation of her work during the past three years. The gift was a gold wristwatch, and was presented by Harold Williams, class president, at a special meeting of the group.

A 14-year absence hasn't dulled Clair Bee's appetite for the Mansfield variety of butterscotch pie. The former Mansfielder, who has gained wide acclaim as basketball coach of Long Island university, spent a few hours in between trains in the city yesterday. Walking around to renew old acquaintances, Bee spotted the restaurant where he dined while residing here and it brought back memories of butterscotch pie. He refused a number of dinner invitations last evening so he could eat at his favorite restaurant, which, he found out, still serves good butterscotch pie.

BACK IN JAIL

Released, Man Lands In Cell Again 5 Hours Later.

Frank Turner, 43, of 96 Benton street, was released from the county jail yesterday morning after serving 30 days on a charge of petit larceny. Five hours later he was back behind bars in the city jail on a similar charge.

Arraigned before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch in municipal court this morning Turner pleaded guilty and drew another 30-day term.

Police arrested him at Fourth and Main street shortly after noon yesterday when the manager of the Velmar Shoe store, North Main street, reported the man had taken several pairs of hose.

SEEK $20,000 FUND TRANSFER

Commissioners Ask Court O.K. To Pay Debt To State For Care In T. B. Cases.

County commissioners today sought authority to transfer $20,000 from a surplus in the county bond retirement fund to the general fund to pay off the county debt to state hospitals for the care of tuberculosis patients.

The transfer must be authorized by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston. Commissioners filed their petition in common pleas court.

They pointed out that the county has more than $40,000 in its bond retirement fund while only $17,812 is needed to pay off the remaining county indebtedness, leaving a surplus of about $23,000. The T. B. debt amounts to approximately $13,000.

Commissioners explained that they incurred the debt in anticipation of funds that will be produced by a half-mill T. B. levy, collected for the first time this year.

The T. B. funds will not be half real estate tax collection is available, however, until the first completed in the spring.

Beginning this year, the county can pay its T. B. bills paid from the $45,000 a year produced by the half-mill levy and probably will be able to build up a fund to finance the purchase or construction of its own T. B. hospital, it was said.

LEGLESS BEAUTY WALKS DOWN CHURCH AISLE, TAKES HUSBAND

(By United Press)

HACKENSACK, N. J.—Jessie Simpson's struggle to readjust her life after losing both legs under a train three years ago, was crowned today.

She was married last night to her childhood sweetheart and they have gone south on a honeymoon.

As a bride, she was prettier than ever, everybody agreed, and that meant something because even after her disaster and long months of suffering, she still had been able to work as a photographer's model.

There wasn't a line of tragedy in her face or slightest halt in her walk down the aisle of the church on the arm of her father. She has mastered the use of artificial legs well enough to dance, drive an automobile, play golf and ride horseback.

No wedding in living memory attracted such attendance in Hackensack. The First Presbyterian church, with seats for only 450, was packed with 700, and another 300 stood outside all during the half-hour ceremony in weather so cold that the shutter on one photographer's camera was frozen. Most of them were there to pay tribute to a heroine, not from curiosity over a crippled girl, because Miss Simpson was no novelty to people of the town. She has operated a beauty shop since she got the artificial legs.

The bridegroom was James R. Steward, young advertising executive. They had been sweethearts before the accident and his loyalty and daily encouragement did much to speed her recovery.

'STUBBORNNESS' HIT IN MESSAGE TO WHITE HOUSE

Pontiff Says Obstacles 'Daily Become More Difficult to Surmount' In Peace Move.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Pope Pius XII advised President Roosevelt today that the immediate chances for peace were reduced to a "slight probability" by "stubborn obstacles" which "become daily more difficult to surmount."

The Pontiff called upon the "friends of peace" to "visualize" the seriousness of these obstacles and the improbability of cessation of war "so long as the present state of the opposing forces remains essentially unchanged."

These expressions and a hope for the eventual attainment of peace were made in a letter to the president, a reply to a communication of Dec. 23 in which Mr. Roosevelt disclosed he was sending to the Pope a personal representative, Myron C. Taylor, to assist in "our parallel endeavors for peace."

It bespoke a "providential help," His Holiness said, when the President at Christmas time placed himself in the vanguard "of those who would promote peace" and succor the victims of war.

"It is," the Pontiff declared, "an exemplary act of fraternal and hearty solidarity between the new and the old world in defense against the chilling breath of aggressive and deadly godless and anti-christian tendencies, that threaten to dry up the fountainhead, whence civilization has come and drawn its strength."

In such circumstances, the Pope said, using the plural pronoun as in all Papal utterances, "we shall find a special satisfaction" in receiving a personal representative from Mr. Roosevelt.

His Holiness chose to ignore criticism by some Protestants in this country that Taylor's mission appeared to be a step toward a union of church and state. Taylor, now in Florida, has not indicated when he will sail.

Not That It Matters

We're Not Listening Club Finds a Supporter After Session of Dial-Twisting

—By JANE WILLIAMS

AFTER listening to the daytime radio programs of the nation the other afternoon for more than two hours, decided to apply for membership in the We're-Not-Listening club in New York. It is an organized protest against the putrid programs that pollute the air waves during the greater part of the day.

From 2 until 4 p. m. I tried to get just one little program that might possibly have some good music, but with every turn of the knob I'd run into something like ". . . . and the girl was hysterical with fear" . . . "I knew her before she divorced her husband to marry her daughter's fiance" . . . "We could have a new car too, if we didn't pay for anything" . . . and more of this alleged "family stuff" which is doing as much to tear down family standards as any one factor in America today.

The women of a New York town are actually doing something about it—intelligent women everywhere are bitterly resentful not only at these silly "drama" programs but the so-called children's programs in the early evening—and have formed a We're Not Listening club. They are writing en masse to sponsors that they will not listen, and will not buy products that are advertised in this manner.

WHEN you are feeding the birds—and of course you ARE feeding them this kind of weather, aren't you?—you'd better enforce a "No Starlings Allowed" policy. This month's Ohio Conservation Bulletin tells of how the starlings are driving out all other types of song birds, driving them away from food and water and stealing their nests.

But even more serious is the menace they set up by carrying disease germs, poisons, weed-seed and by killing trees and shrubs. Yet strangely enough they have their use, according to Jack Miller, Canadian naturalist. Great quantities are being used in Canada for food. They are being used for English blackbird pie.

And if you think bunnies are prolific, consider the starling. Each female raises two broods a year, from three to six birds, and the total number of this European import more than doubles every year.

Their insolence is annoying. They swooped down in our back yard to drive the other birds away from the grain and suet, and when the jays chattered, the red birds scolded and the martins gave them dirty looks, they just gobbled the food faster.

Smart alecs!

OF ALL THE PEOPLE who crowded the Hanna theater in Cleveland last Monday night to welcome John Barrymore in "My Dear Children," no one enjoyed the performance any more than Mr. Barrymore. He loved every line of the clever comedy and his own famous ad libbing; he loved the strutting and the "hamming" demanded by his role as the broken down Shakespearean actor, and HOW he enjoyed doing once again the melancholy soliloquy of Hamlet, sandwiched in between the mouthings of a mountebank.

And while his ad libbing (which seemed to get out of the bounds of decency at times) was a delight to those who remembered him as the tragic Peter Ibbetson, it was the way in which he took the heckling from the audience that floored this spectator. Remembering the Barrymore who once threw a pillow at a sleeper in the first row, it was amazing to see his patience with the loud-mouthed hecklers. When the famous Barrymore voice dropped to a whisper in the soliloquy, and a gent with an unbuttoned vest and mouth sitting next us yelled "LOUDER," the actor answered him gently: "I'm only trying to remember my lines, Gus—give me time."

The funniest ad lib was a sotto voice comment inspired by his own heart affairs which have cost him more than a million dollars. When one of the girls said: "But father, I must have money," he turned to the audience and said, confidentially, "That's the lousiest line in the whole show."

NOTES ON THE CUFF: The Pathfinder says that the lowest possible temperature, according to students of cyrogenics, is 273 degrees below zero. Never mind the cyrogenics, 15 below is cold enough to make us long for the good old long ones that folded around the ankle and left a bulge on your stockings. . . . Adolph Hitler congratulating Fuehrer No. 2 Goering on his 47th birthday anniversary was merely a bit of vanity. Because living to be 47 years old in Germany isn't an act of God but of Hitler. . . .

According to a News-Journal story Wednesday there are "approximately 500 provisional appointees occupying the three positions in the liquor stores here." Which probably accounts for the crowds you see in the dispensaries.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Pegler Recites Another Case He Thinks Merits Attention of Mr. Green

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—To Mr. William Green, American Federation of Labor:

"Dear Mr. Green: A few days ago I wrote that the roster of officials of unions in the American Federation of Labor contained the nucleus for a good, major league rogues' gallery.

"In case you thought I was mistaken, I am going to tell you today that the head of one of your big international unions was sentenced to Atlanta Penitentiary for four years and six months for white slavery. This is not Willie Bioff, the Chicago racketeer and vice monger.

"The man I mean is George Scalese, a Brooklyn racketeer, who has become president of the Building Service Employers' International Union. Scalese is a criminal of the vilest type that it is possible to imagine and a member of an old mob in Brooklyn.

"He used to be a bodyguard for Frankie Uale, alias Yale, the Capone mobster who was killed, nevertheless, and since the repeal of prohibition he and other hoodlums of the same type in Brooklyn and New York have moved into the labor racket.

"This Building Service Employes' Union is no cheap little local, Mr. Green, but one of your big international unions, and Scalese has been moving out the old officials of little subsidiary unions which have existed for years and moving in himself.

* * *

"You know all that, but I can't see how you can fail to know what he is or, if you do know what he is, why you haven't had him thrown out of the American Federation of Labor. Do you think it is doing the American Federation of Labor any good to permit such a man to be president of one of your big international unions or doing the rank and file workings stiffs any good to subject them to the rule of a vicious mobster?

"This Scalese, Mr. Green, was convicted in the Federal court in Brooklyn in September, 1913, on four out of eight counts. He and another hoodlum named Joe Alfano, alias Fox, transported a girl from Brooklyn to Boonton, N. J., to work her as a prostitute for their profit. The reason why they received such heavy sentences—Alfano got four years—was that the crime was unusually vicious.

* * *

"Your Mr. Scalese served about four years and put in for a presidential pardon in 1923, but was turned down on the recommendation of the acting attorney general of that time, on the ground that the evidence was "of a most revolting character." He has now put in another application for a presidential pardon, but I have information that some prominent politico-labor leaders think he should be pardoned.

"You wouldn't happen to know anything about that, would you, Mr. Greene? Of course, it is ironic that a man who can't hold public office or even vote, who lost his citizenship for a rotten crime, should be eligible to and hold the presidency of a big union.

"That makes two I have given you, Mr. Green.

"Do you want some more?

"Okay, Mr. Green. I will give you background on plenty of your American Federation of Labor colleagues. It must be interesting work—your job as president of the American Federation of Labor. You meet such nice people.

"Yours very truly,

WESTBROOK PEGLER."

GIRL AT THE FRONT + + + + +

By ROB EDEN

CHAPTER IV.

She had a feeling something was wrong, and glanced quickly into the clothes closet in her rooms, and then into the adjoining bath. Both were empty. Then she turned to unpack her bags, chiding herself for her nervousness. It would be good to get a bath, to get into fresh clothing. She looked about for her overnight bag, but could not immediately find it. Perhaps the porter had placed it in the closet.

A search there failed to reveal it. It was nowhere in either room. It had vanished—the bag which exactly matched the one that had been added to her baggage on board the St. Croix!

In a panic, she grabbed up the phone and asked to be connected with the porter. Yes, he remembered her bags—he had carried them up himself as Alphonse was busy elsewhere. Yes, there had been four of them. He had placed them on the rack by the window—all four of them.

She thanked him and rang for the chambermaid, nervously pacing the floor until the middle-aged servant appeared.

"You rang, Mademoiselle?" she asked when Claire opened the door.

"Have you been on this floor for some time?" the girl demanded.

"All afternoon, Mademoiselle. Is there something wrong?"

"Did you see any one enter my room during the last half hour while I was absent?"

But no, Mademoiselle. I did not. But I was not in this corridor all the time. I had my work to do in the other wing; we are so shorthanded, you know, because of the war. Many women have taken men's jobs and we have so much to do. I am worn out from work, but I do it willingly. It is for France."

"You're certain you didn't see any strange person near my door?"

"But, no, Mademoiselle. I did not. Has something happened?

"No. Thank you" Claire dismissed her, and turned the key in the lock as the woman left.

Bornet was right. He had not been exaggerating when he told her about spies. That they were everywhere.

One of them must have slipped into her room during her absence and stolen her bag, thinking it was the one that contained the incendiary powder!

* * *

AFTER the first feeling of panic had passed, Claire sat down and forced herself to take stock of the situation.

That she was in danger, there was little doubt. When those who had attempted to make her the instrument of destroying the great ocean liner St. Croix discovered that she knew of the treachery, they undoubtedly would make some new attempt against her.

The Surete Generale, she knew, was a famous organization—one of the most efficient secret services in the world—but it was not very reassuring to have one of its chiefs, Pierre Bornet, tell her that even they did not know many of the spy rings actively operating in France.

There was the added worry about Bill Cameron. Where was he? What had happened to him? She could not bring herself to believe what Bornet so obviously did—that Cameron had been done away with by those who had prevented his sailing to America. That would be too horrible—too horrible, even to think about.

* * *

Danny Brooks! The name popped into her mind. Danny was a wire service correspondent who had known Cameron for years. Through her employer she had met him frequently during their stay in Paris. She had gone out with him several times to shows and night clubs.

In a few minutes she had him on the telephone and was hearing his surprised exclamation to learn she was back in Paris.

"I can't explain over the phone, Danny," she told him. "But I've got to see you some time this evening."

He suggested dinner and said he would be able to make it about 8 o'clock. The appointment was made for the Rond-Point des Champs-Elysees at that hour. Claire was to meet him there.

She congratulated herself as she put down the phone. Danny might have heard something from Cameron—might have some confidential information that would solve the mystery of his sudden disappearance. At any rate, he could help her.

She walked to the window and pulled back the heavy black draperies that shrouded them. They had been put up at the first alarm of war at the same time that the windows were painted dark blue and diagonal strips of heavy tape were stuck at the glass. There was a theory that in case of bombs dropping close by, the tape would lessen the danger of the glass shattering.

* * *

She turned out the light and opened the window, looking down on the Rue de Rivoli. She could hear the swish of tires as cars moved along, but aside from tiny specks of light from their hooded headlights, could see nothing of them. Across the street were the Tuileries, the beautiful gardens now shrouded in inky blackness.

Leaning out, she looked toward the place de la Concorde. Usually at this hour of night in peacetime Paris, the huge fountains would be brilliantly lighted and the water would be cascading down sculptured edges in a never-ending golden shower. Now, even the water was turned off as an economy measure, and there wasn't a shred of light.

Farther to the west where the Eifel tower ordinarily was outlined in flashing electric bulbs to the very tip of its more than 900 feet of delicate steel framework, she could see nothing. The tower, she knew, was there but it might as well not have existed so far as her senses were concerned. Even the usual red light at the top, a warning to cruising planes, was missing now. No French planes would be circling in that area. If enemy planes should happen to collide with it—well, it was the fortune of war.

* * *

She carefully closed the window, pulled the curtain and then switched on the light. It was later than she thought. She'd have to hurry. While her bath was running, she unpacked her bags and laid out fresh clothes for the evening. Her gowns were wrinkled, but she had no time now to have one of them pressed. The black one she chose would have to do, even it was a bit wrinkled.

By a quarter to 8, she was standing in the darkness at the front entrance of the hotel waiting for a cab, her gas mask—which she had fortunately been able to reclaim from the desk, as it had not yet been given away — slung by its strap over one shoulder.

A car drew up at the curb, and from the tiny light on the meter she recognized it as a cab and stepped forward. As she did so a dark shadow loomed before her, and she drew back, startled—a bit frightened.

"I beg your pardon, Mademoiselle," a man said. "I've been waiting for some time for a cab." His voice was soft but vibrant, and despite the fact that he spoke in French, Claire detected the trace of an accent, unmistakably American.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said, in English.

"That's quite all right." The man answered in English, also. "You're American, aren't you?" Without giving her a chance to reply, he went on, quickly, "So am I—from Indiana. Perhaps I can give you a lift? I'm not going very far, but I never would find my way on foot in the dark."

"You're very kind," Claire answered, impulsively. "As a matter of fact I'm afraid I'll be late for an appointment. I'm going to the Rond-Point."

"Fine. Then jump in. I'm getting off sooner than that, and you can take the cab on to your engagement."

* * *

Somehow, despite Bornet's stories of spies and the dangers of Paris after dark, Claire hadn't the slightest fear of her unknown acquaintance. There was something in his voice, a reassuring quality, that drove all thoughts of danger from her mind.

"Thanks," she answered "That's very good of you."

She sensed, rather than saw him step quickly forward and open the back door of the cab and she fearlessly entered and seated herself. The man spoke to the driver in a low tone—she didn't catch what he said—and a moment later she felt him settle himself beside her as the door of the car was slammed shut.

"Care for a cigaret?" the man asked. She thanked him, and declined, but urged him to smoke if he wished. She caught but a glimpse of his nose and mouth as he touched a flameless lighter to his cigaret and then she saw the end of it glowing in the darkness, followed by a sigh of evident satisfaction as he inhaled deeply.

"Been dying for a smoke," he said, "but I didn't dare light up out in the street."

They rode in silence for several blocks, the cab moving slowly, carefully, as the driver picked his way through the darkness.

"I know you're worried about Bill Cameron," the man at Claire's side said, suddenly, and she almost jumped out of her seat

"Wha—what?" she stammered

"Cameron," he repeated. "I know you're worried—wondering what has happened to him." His voice was low, tense. Through the glass partition separating them from the driver, it couldn't have been more than a mere murmur. "Don't worry about him" the voice went on. "He is alive. I know that much, but I can't tell you any more now."

"But—but how do you know—how do you know who I am?" she demanded, a feeling of panic sweeping over her.

"I know—lots of things, Miss Dutton," the voice said. "I even know whom you will meet tonight. And I must warn you to be on your guard."

"Why, what do you mean? I'm meeting only one person—a good friend."

"I mean just that. You will meet more than one person—several. Some will be your friends—others will not. That is why I say you must be careful. Be on your guard every minute."

"Who—who are you?"

"Never mind. You may find out soon enough, but I can't tell you now."

The Passing of Senator Borah

WHEN the record of Senator William E. Borah is later subjected to the calm study which was impossible during his vigorous lifetime it is not unlikely that the Idaho statesman will be accorded a place in American history high above that of some men who may seem to have achieved more greatly in public life.

Through more than thirty years of service in the United States senate, Borah's courage, independence, great vitality and extensive knowledge of national and international affairs made him a towering figure in an era of changing political thought, shifting majorities and gradual progress toward liberalized ideas of which he was an early exponent.

Always supported by a substantial majority of voters in his own state, Borah was not so fortunate in national acceptance of his ideas, and he was frequently at outs with Republican party leaders, although never to the extent of leaving that party.

It was his preference to battle within the party for later acceptance of his more liberal policies, and his effort to secure the presidential nomination in 1936 was with the purpose of testing the issue between "old guard" leadership and his own views.

Many of the progressive steps taken along social and economic lines during the past three decades bear the imprint of Senator Borah's early advocacy, and not a few legislative efforts were marked for failure as a result of his relentless opposition.

His keen mind, gift of oratory and exceptional ability in debate made a dreaded combination for those who opposed him, and defeat of efforts to place the United States in the League of Nations and the World Court was credited in large part to his determined opposition.

Born on an Illinois farm in 1865, Senator Borah was another of the great Americans of rural origin and the religious training common to that period.

It was notable in Senator Borah's career that, however much his associates in public life may have differed with his views, his sincerity was unquestioned and he was held in high regard by all who knew him.

In the death of Senator Borah America has lost one of its greatest statesmen—a man whose leadership and inspiration will be much missed.

Girls Win Scholastic Honors

ARE GIRLS "better students" than boys, or is it that they have fewer distractions from school work, less diversification of interests or greater appreciation of the importance of an education?

A variety of explanations might be given of the fact that the four top scholastic honors in the January graduating class of Mansfield high school were awarded to girls, as well as a majority of the "honorable mentions."

Just how much bearing on later attainments high standing in school and college may have has long been a debatable question, but it cannot be doubted that a creditable showing in studies while in school and college evidences traits of interest and application that can be turned to advantage afterward.

Mansfield has had some noteworthy examples, in the past, of persons who were regarded as "poor students" making unusual successes after leaving school—but in each such instance it appears that the required "application" was merely deferred, and that the things neglected in school had to be learned later.

Anyhow, congratulations to those who are "tops" in scholastic honors, as well as a word of cheer to those lower in the list—keep in mind that Thomas A. Edison had trouble with his school work but managed to do right well in spite of that.

Middle Class Menaced

ONE of the most interesting slants on the war across the Atlantic, which Americans find so hard to understand, is that of Dr. Peter Drucker, a New York correspondent for British publications.

"This war," he explains, "is a social revolution, in which the middle classes are doing most of the fighting and all the paying, losing their livelihoods in the abolition of private international trade.

"The war will be won by that country whose middle classes can hold out longest. In Germany the middle classes have been greatly weakened if not decimated."

It seems as if the middle classes (composed largely of professional and small salaried groups) had been losing steadily for some time before the present war began, in America and England as well as continental countries.

The depression appears to have fallen hardest on middle-class people, because public help has been mostly reserved for unemployed workmen and others farther down in the social scale. And as business conditions improve, skilled wage-workers often profit more than skilled office employes and professional people.

Is this to be the social pattern of the future, with the well-educated middle classes dwindling in importance, and power and profit going mainly to the aristocrats of capital and labor? That would make it a sad world from the viewpoint of doctors, lawyers, teachers and those engaged in small businesses.

Hunting Casualties

NEW YORK STATE'S hunting season took the lives of thirty persons. Some died by drowning while hunting ducks; some were shot accidentally by their companions, and others shot themselves through carelessness. There were 175 persons injured in hunting accidents. It is likely that hunting licenses will be recalled and other punishments meted out for some of these mishaps.

When New York's toll is added to the totals from the rest of the country it becomes clear that not all the danger in the hunting season is confined to the hunted animals.

California's ham-and-eggers have decided to compromise on not getting $20 every Thursday, instead of the $20 that they previously didn't get.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I kept seeing his face through a veil of smoke, with white lights beating down on it, but I couldn't place him. There was plenty of smoke in this room, in this pint-sized room on 52nd street, but there were no white glaring lights. There was a dim aura or glow, no more, and Woody Herman's orchestra was threading its way through the nostalgic, rhythmic sweeps of a long since forgotten blues song. Try as I might — as persistently as I searched the corners of my memory, this man with the broad shoulders and the strange, intense, yet pleasant face eluded me.

So I said to Howard Richmond, "who is that fellow?" and he replied, "Why that's Mike Vetrano. He's Woody's manager. You ought to know him. He was a Golden Glove champion."

So that's where I had seen him—fighting in those best and most thrilling of all fights—the Golden Gloves. Mike fought at 175 pounds—the light-heavy division—and he was crowned champ of that division in as hectic a bout as you will remember. It ended with Mike standing under the glare of those white lights, and the other fellow a still, beaten, sodden figure on the canvas.

* * *

AFTER that Mike and the New York Golden Glovers fought the Chicago Glovers, and Mike won his bout there too, thereby becoming inter-city champion. Before that he had played football with Carideo at Mt. Vernon high school, and also at prep school, before Frankie Carideo went on to become the most famous of all Knute Rockne's all-American quarterbacks. Mike had followed that up with a year of wrestling for Jack Curley ("I was a hero 18 nights in a row and a bum for twelve".) And then he graduated to the band business. Mike is road manager for Herman. He has been with other bands. A strange place for an ex-fighter to land, managing dance bands. What does he think about it? . . . "When I think of all those beatings I took, and all those nights I spent having my leg twisted off, and throwing punks out of the ring on their heads, and getting thrown out by those same punks, I think—why didn't somebody tell me about dance bands earlier. This is the life for me."

* * *

THAT'S Mike. Now a word on Woody Herman. A quiet, almost serious boy from Milwaukee. He used to be with Isham Jones. They have a 14-piece band now, run on a cooperative basis—mostly medium tempo, occasionally sweet, but with a decided talent for deep, strange blues. Look for him on the air. Give him a hearing. Hear him a couple of times and see what you think. Listen to his "Wood-Choppers' Ball." . . . Listen to all those blues songs he plays, with emphasis on his introductory theme and his wild, high-stepping "Blues on Parade" as a sign-off. Get the name straight: Woody Herman. Plays a little clarinet—plays a little sax—a little of this and the other. About five-eight, I should say, maybe seven. Slight. Good strong voice. Baritone.

The last I saw of him he was shaking hands with Jack Robbins, the music publisher, and waving his hand to a couple of song pluggers who had just come in.

Time to Support Budget Cuts

By HARLEY L. LUTZ
Professor of Public Finance
Princeton University.

THE advance stories from reporters and commentators about the new federal budget indicated that it would be, as it turned out to be, a piece of political strategy.

The purpose evidently is to force a double-barreled choice upon congress: first, a choice between reduced appropriations and a more liberal level of spending; and second, if appropriations are raised above the presidential estimates, a further choice between borrowing and taxing to provide the money.

It would be improper to accept the rumor and gossip from Washing as an accurate description of the policy revealed in the budget, despite the fact that those who have originated these rumors to get around and they do have access to sources of information not available to the ordinary citizen. There are certain aspects of the story which ring true, however, because they are in accord with the accepted rules of the American political game.

It is true, for example, that the American conception of government by a political party is one of "grab." Legislators and officials assume that their chief function is to "bring home the bacon," and their leading claim to public office is that they have brought, or can bring, the bacon. It follows, therefore, that all candidates for public office live and die in the belief that a reduction of public spending in an election year is a bad thing.

This low conception of the true nature of party government and of the true character of party responsibility is not a new development. It is now nearly fifty years since there has been a president with enough courage and vision to declare that the people should support the government rather than be supported by it. The opposite view now prevails, and no one in our history has given more emphasis than Mr. Roosevelt to the notion that government can and should support the people. Under this view, the test of fitness for office is the amount of largess that can be secured, and the members of congress will naturally tremble at the thought of facing the electorate next autumn if they should fail to make the usual prodigal provision for their respective constituencies.

Here is the real reason that has finally compelled Mr. Roosevelt to admit that he cannot balance the federal budget. For seven years he has been trying to support the people by federal spending. In this time and by this process he has set loose forces and appetites which he is unable to control—ferocious and coracious pressure groups, using all of the tactics by which small, aggressive, unscrupulous minorities are able to control large, inert, passive majorities the world over.

Whether the rumors as to the purpose actuating the president are true or not, it could be true that he would prefer that congress take over the unpleasant job of facing the rapacious pressure groups. If any one is to be torn to pieces by them, let it be the congressmen rather than Mr. President.

On the other hand, if the reductions in the budget flow from a genuine determination to end the folly of spending, then every citizen who has his feet on the ground instead of in the public treasury feed box should insist that his representatives in house and senate support the policy. The wasteful and unnecessary spending will never cease until those who believe that it should be stopped become as alert and aggressive as those who are now clamoring for bigger deficits.

Vitamin Treatment Of Nerve Disorders

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SYNTHETIC vitamin B is being widely used for a number of conditions. The publicity which has been given its use in the treatment of Lou Gehrig has brought a stack of inquiries to this desk.

Lou Gehrig's ailment, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, has been called in the public press "chronic infantile paralysis," which it is not. It has nothing whatever to do with infantile paralysis and is only superficially like it. If vitamin B does Lou Gehrig's case any good, it will be a new thing in medicine. Here's hoping that it will!

In neuritis, that is to say, paralysis of the peripheral nerves, vitamin B, or its concentrate, thiamine chloride, seems, however, to have a very definitely good effect. Neuritis is a degeneration of the nerve fibers which may be due to a number of poisonings—vitamin deficiency, lead, alcohol, arsenic and other minerals. Whatever the cause, the effect on the nerves and the physiology and relief of the condition are very much the same, and vitamin B will prevent the development of neuritis, as well as cure it.

Results in Nerve Ills.

Only now has it been possible to take a long range view of the results of vitamin B treatment of nervous disorders. I have before me a report of over 500 cases of neuritis treated by vitamin B, which have been followed for over five years. Sixty-one per cent became symptom-free; 36 per cent were improved, and three per cent were unimproved.

The improvement begins within three weeks and the improvement reaches its maximum in nine weeks, according to this report.

If vitamin B is then discontinued, recurrence of symptoms takes place. At the end of a year about half the patients are in as bad shape as they were at the beginning. At the end of five years, all of them are as bad as they were if no vitamin B has been taken in the meantime. The readministration of vitamin B in these recurrences in quite as effective as in the original cases.

Another condition in which vitamin B has been found valuable is chronic alcoholism. Chronic alcoholics lose their appetites and fail to digest their food because of the deficiency of the vitamin. Besides that, the neuritis (alcohol paralysis) which comes on is prevented by the administration of vitamin B.

It has been said that the real cause of cirrhosis of the liver and of delirium tremens is due not to alcohol but to vitamin deficiency. I do not believed there are any good grounds for this belief.

Issues Challenge.

Egg white in water with sugar and salt is a fairly nutritious diet but contains no vitamins. When any research group can produce delirium tremens on a diet of albumin, water, sugar and salt, I will be ready to believe their contentions that alcohol plays no part in the etiology of the condition.

Listen, World!

Accept No Man's Pity.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DO NOT permit yourself to accept pity—either from yourself or from any other man.

Pity is the most dangerous form of emotional charity. It may seem to comfort you at first, but beware of such comfort, for it will turn you into a spiritual bum, a whining weakling, ever on the watch for handouts.

If you MUST kill yourself shamefully, take to drink, dope, or wild women. But don't take to pity.

Drink and dope and wild women will destroy your body, but they will leave some remnant of pride and hope in you—some savor of honor to your name.

BUT PITY WILL GET YOU ENTIRELY.

It does not matter what fate has done to you—

You may be crippled in body—broken financially — cheated and despoiled by life—robbed by death of the thing that was dearest to you—

Still within you there will remain something that is unbeaten, something that may inspire respect and command service—

AND STILL YOU MAY COME BACK IF YOU DON'T ACCEPT PITY.

Remember William Ernest Henley's cry—"INVICTUS"?

"Out of the night that covers me
Black as the pit from pole to pole
I thank whatever gods may be,
For my unconquerable soul.

"In the fell clutches of circumstances
I have not winced or cried aloud
Under the bludgeoning of chance
My head is bloody but unbowed.

"Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the horror of the shade,
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

"It matters not how straight the gate
How charged with punishment the scroll
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

Those are noble words. Make them YOUR words.

Stand up straight in your rags! Stand unquivering, in your wounds

God alone knows what's around the corner.

God alone knows if there's ANYTHING around the corner.

But this moment is yours! AND YOUR SOUL IS YOURS. WHATEVER FATE MAY HAVE DONE TO YOUR BODY OR YOUR PURSE.

HOLD FAST TO THAT PROUD TREASURE. DO NOT TRADE IT FOR ANY MAN'S PITY.

Our Trains Lead World.

The year now past recorded a remarkable speeding-up of passenger train schedules. The number of daily runs at 60 miles an hour or over increased from 864 to 997. There are 1,070 regular high-speed runs, counting the weekly and semi-weekly performances of the streamliners to Florida and California.

Not many years ago American railroads were far behind in the matter of speed. According to Railroad Magazine, with the exception of the Atlantic City fliers, not a single train made scheduled mile-a-minute runs, from start to stop, in 1928. Since 1930 the daily mileage covered by the speeders has increased almost 60 times.

The increased average speed of American trains during the past few years, is part of the widespread improvement in service necessitated by the rise of motor competition.

The Association of American Railroads asserts that this improvement has not and will not be accomplished at the price of safety. But since we can pay too high a price for speed, safety must continue to be the first consideration.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Summary of Week's Happenings

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE PRESIDENT signed into law this week the first job completed by the new session of congress: a bill to protect witnesses before congressional agencies. Hardly anyone noticed, because both houses still were warming up for heavier tasks ahead:

With an alacrity that worried some editorial writers, the house obliged Mr. Roosevelt last week-end by okaying an appropriation of $264,611,252 to tide over the defenders of American neutrality till June 30, fiscal year's end.

But the navy's plan to construct four fast, 45,000-ton battleships was snagged by inquisitive members of a house subcommittee. Though the ships would be larger than any now in existence, congressmen demanded to know why the U. S. should not build superwhoppers up to 65,000 tons. Meanwhile, the Maritime commission prepared to ask bids on the two largest liners (35,000 tons) ever built in America—ships convertible into aircraft carriers.

And as the House Naval Affairs committee heard Admiral H. R. Stark, navy operations chief, ask for bigger submarines for possible use in the South Atlantic, the Military Affairs committee heard Secretary of War Woodring plead for funds to convert America's "paper" army, scattered in isolated posts, into a real "army in being."

Whittling the Budget.

The house—jealous of its right to orginate money legislation — also began scrutinizing the president's 1941 budget proposals.

In whittling $94,492,166 from what he asked for the many government offices not in any regular department, the appropriations committee completely ignored the National Resources Planning board and the office of government reports. And the house itself eliminated funds for the council of personnel administration.

Federal workers resigned themselves to stringing along on their present salaries when the committee lopped off a $3,088,000 item for raises.

Trade Agreements.

While Republicans on the house ways and means committee heckled, supporters of the reciprocal trade agreements act asked its renewal before expiration June 12.

Assistant Secretary of State Grady foresaw a return to "old log-rolling methods" if the senate reclaimed authority to ratify trade agreements.

Under Secretary of Commerce Noble, a Republican, said trade with pact-signing nations had jumped 60% whil trade with non-agreement nations was rising only 30%.

On the Record.

Digging this week for facts that might help them shape future legislation, congressional committees turned up a fair-to-middling crop of headlines:

American copper producers, a mining executive told the monopoly committee, held prices at a "fictitious and artificial" level for some months after the 1929 market crash—at the request of "responsible government officials."

"Wholesale arrests without charges," the senate civil liberties committee heard, had been made in a search for "agitators" among California agricultural workers.

At Home

Long After Huey.

In Louisiana, where a Democratic nomination is as good as election, the top man in the primary must beat all his opponents combined or race the runner-up in a second heat. This week, for the first time, the 12-year-old political machine built by the late Huey P. Long was forced into a run-off.

Huey's brother Earl, running to keep his job as governor, came in well ahead of his nearest competitor in Tuesday's primary. But four opponents together polled more votes than he. His challenger in the run-off, Feb. 20, will be Sam Jones, a lawyer and American Legionnaire backed by New Orleans newspapers to clean up scandals that have engulfed almost all Huey's heirs except Earl.

The G-Men Nip a Plot.

Reconnoitering the Pennsylvania-New York border recently, G-Men with long-range cameras snapped men drilling with rifles. And last Sunday, in Manhattan, FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover announced that 17 members of a "Christian Front" had been arrested for "conspiring to overthrow, put down and destroy the government of the United States."

After final instruction in marksmanship and bomb-making this group planned "to bring about a complete eradication of all Jews, seize all public utilities" and set up what the plotters referred to as "a dictatorship similar to Hitler's."

Pleading innocent, the man were held in $50,000 bail apiece.

Busting the Trusts.

Firing simultaneously in Chicago and New Orleans, last Monday, federal grand juries returned anti-trust indictments against 85 labor leaders, contractors, manufacturers, unions and other organizations. Those accused in Chicago included, prosecutors said, the country's 10 biggest tile makers; in New Orleans, the Building and Construction Trades council and most of the city's AFL building trades unions. That day's work brought to 400 the defendants named in seven cities in the justice department's drive against alleged monopolies in the building business.

Death In a Hole.

In a blast-blocked, gas-choked tunnel 600 feet down a coal shaft at Bartley, W. Va., Ernest Hoops, 41, scribbled a note on a scrap of paper and stuck it in his cap: "If we don't make it out, Darling Wife, take my body down home and take Rev. Spears to preach my funeral." This week funerals were preached for Hoops and 90 of his neighbors, victims of the worst U. S. mine disaster in 12 years.

War Within War.

CIO and AFL, in their recommendations to congress, are both backing health insurance, more money for relief, an expanded low-cost housing program, no amendments to the wage-hour law. But AFL favors changing the Wagner act to give craft guilds a better break, while CIO would amend it to protect industrial unions.

Daniel J. Tobin, head of AFL's big Teamsters' union, lays 95% of the "fault-finding" against the Wagner act to labor's civil war. Last week-end he urged the rank and file on both sides to "rise up" and demand peace.

Abroad

Admiral at the Helm.

When Japan's friend Germany kissed-and-made-up with Japan's foe Russia, last August, the Nipponese shelved fascist-minded Premier Kiichiro Hiranuma for Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, described as favoring cooperation with Americans and Britons. But the new government failed to get Uncle Sam's signature on a new trade treaty to replace the one that runs out this coming Friday. So, last Sunday, Premier Abe resigned.

To replace him, Emperor Hirohito had been expected to pick another general. He chose, instead, affable Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, 59, who rose through the ranks to command Japan's fleet and once was naval minister.

Politics Down South.

In Ecuador, soldiers nipped an attempted revolution led by ex-President Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra, defeated in last week's presidential election.

In Mexico, the bodies of two supporters of presidential candidate Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, slain when his train was ambushed at a rally where he spoke next day.

French Reds Purged.

Of 75 Communists in the French champer of deputies when war started, 36 are in jail, 17 in the army, 10 in hiding. And 12 are still in parliament, having disavowed their party's policies after it was outlawed in September. The 63 who had not done so were formally ousted this week.

Nature

Four In a Million.

Doctors figure one out of every 100 births will be twins, one in 10,000 triplets, one in 1,000,000 quadruplets. Mrs. Clyde Short, a coal miner's wife who lives in a log cabin at Nauvoo, Ala., beat the longest of those odds by giving birth to three daughters and a son within an hour and 15 minutes one night this week. The girls were immediately named Faith, Hope and Charity. The boy was named Franklin.

Tale About a Toad.

Scientists disagree whether toads can live, as some are reputed to have done, sealed up in cement. This week they debated the story of Airless Joe, of the genus bufo, said to have survived 20 years in a concrete slab.

The Crowell, Tex., newspaper reporter who told it said Joe had been cracked out white and apparently dead, but woke right up, blinked at the sun, changed color—and went back to sleep.

MISS MARY K. TAWSE, R. L. SCHISKA WEDDED

Noon Ceremony Performed at Bride's Home Today; Reception for Friends; Relatives Follows; Couple Leave on Southern Trip.

IN A PRETTY CEREMONY at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Tawse, 520 Edgewood road, Miss Mary Katherine Tawse became the bride of Robert Lewis Schiska at 11:30 o'clock today. Families and close friends of the couple gathered for the wedding, which was performed by Rev. David N. Roller, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

The service was read before the mantel, which was banked with southern smilax and lighted with two three-branched candelabra. An oblong arrangement of pale pink carnations centered the mantelpiece, while vases of pink snapdragons and stevia were used throughout the home. Mrs. Joy Herbert played nuptial music on the harp. Her selections included: "To a Wild Rose" by MacDowell, Cadman's "At Dawning," "Liebestraum" by Liszt and the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. During the ceremony she played "Schone Errinerung."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her wedding costume was of white moire, fashioned with a fitted bodice, full skirt, sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves. White velvet roses held the circular, fingertip bridal veil in place. The former Miss Tawse carried her great-grandmother's handmade lace handkerchief and a round hand bouquet of pink camelias, pink bouvardia and lilies-of-the-valley. These flowers were arranged in concentric circles and tied with narrow pink satin ribbon

Chooses Brothers.

Mr. Schiska, who is the son of Mrs. Anna P. Schiska, 142 North Weldon avenue, chose his brother, Harold Schiska, and his bride's brother, Robert Tawse, to be ushers at the wedding.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony, and the bridal table was centered with a bouquet of pink and white sweetpeas, white snapdragons and stevia. Smilax decorated the cloth, and the three-tiered wedding cake was iced in pink and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Schiska are leaving later today for a southern wedding trip. For traveling, Mrs. Schiska wore a black wool ensemble trimmed with Persian lamb and black accessories. Upon their return to Mansfield about Feb. 1, Mr. and Mrs. Schiska will be at home to friends in their new residence, 367 Bartley avenue.

Mrs. Schiska, who was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school, attended Ohio Wesleyan university and Lake Erie College for Women. Mr. Schiska is a graduate of St. Peter's high school and an employe of Shumaker's drug store.

Dr. and Mrs. John Smith of Jackson, Mich., and William Dummrick of Columbus and Mr. and Mrs. Burton Crobaugh, Tiffin, were out-of-town guests in attendance.

Two Parties.

Mrs. Schiska was honored with two pre-nuptial parties on the evenings preceding her marriage. Mrs. Paul Shumaker gave a guest towel shower for her Thursday night at her home on East Townview circle. There were three tables of bridge in play with Mrs. Donald Frampton and Miss Geraldine Young receiving prizes. They presented these to the honoree. Refreshments were served at small tables decorated with flowers and pastel pink, yellow and green shades. The hostess gave the bride an electrical gift.

Last evening the Misses Jane and Dorothy Bacon gave a spinster dinner for the bride at the Towne House. The table was decorated with four large white candles and smaller ones at each place. The guests spent a social evening at the Bacon home on Glenwood boulevard, and gave Mrs. Schiska a shower of personal gifts.

Past Counselors Hold Election of Officers

Officers of the Past Counselors association were elected yesterday at the meeting held at Eagle hall. Miss Mary Beilstein will succeed Mrs. Della Cochran as counselor of the group. Mrs. Mary Smith is the new vice-counselor; Mrs. Esther Beer is secretary, and Mrs. Elizabeth Croskey, treasurer.

One new member, Mrs. Martha Reichert, was welcomed into membership. A 6 o'clock dinner was served to the group by Mrs. Mary Fox and her committee. The next regular meeting will be held at the hall Feb. 6.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Jan. 21.

Sunday's horoscope holds omens of a conflicting nature, with the personal relations giving unrest or concern, despite their activity. While there may be gayety, good fellowship and pleasure trips, there are certain dangers or upset plans. These call for discretion and prudent readjustments. Be alert to accidents.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of contradictory circumstances to cope with. While there will be much activity, desirable change and moderate progress, with social or affectional relations holding happy promise, as well, there are menaces of deceit, treachery and probable accident or other sudden misadventure.

A child born on this day, although talented, enterprising, bold and adventurous, with much personal charm and geniality, may have certain trends toward deceit and treachery, inviting kindred reactions and sufferings from its fellows.

For Monday, Jan. 22.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and strenuous day, with much progress to be made by shrewd, even drastic and high pressure methods. Yet, the best endeavors seem beset by dangers of loss, possibly by confused ideas, duplicity or fraud. It may take tact, intrigue or strategy to circumvent trickery.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which success, happiness and prosperity may depend upon their native shrewdness, prudence and diplomacy, since there are omens of fraud, deception and secret enmities, undermining business as well as personal relations.

A child born on this day may have much adaptibility and talent, with keen imagination and quick intuitions averting much deception in its life.

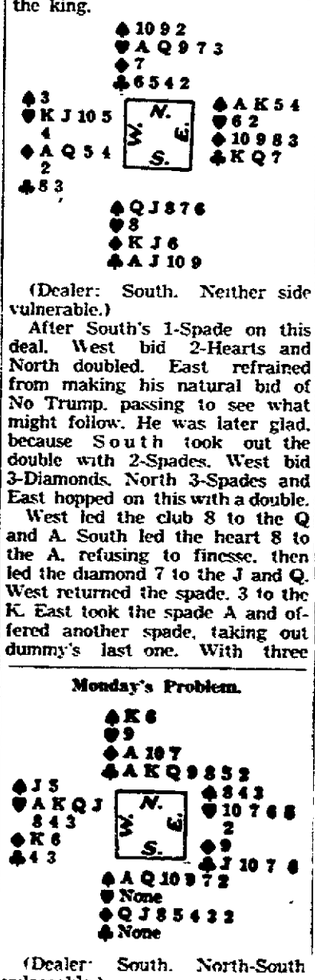
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A TIME TO FINESSE

HOLDING a singleton of a side suit opposite an ace-queen in dummy, it is usually bad tactics to finesse during play of a suit contract, especially if there are no side entries on the table. But if the discard of a loser is needed badly in some other suit, the finesse may be the correct play. It is emphatically so in such situations if the defender at the left had bid that suit, thereby indicating the likelihood of his having the king.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

After South's 1-Spade on this deal, West bid 2-Hearts and North doubled. East refrained from making his natural bid of No Trump, passing to see what might follow. He was later glad, because South took out the double with 2-Spades. West bid 3-Diamonds, North 3-Spades and East hopped on this with a double.

West led the club 8 to the Q and A. South led the heart 8 to the A, refusing to finesse, then led the diamond 7 to the J and Q. West returned the spade, 3 to the K. East took the spade A and offered another spade, taking out dummy's last one. With three tricks already gone, South still had to lose two more diamonds and the club K, so was down two.

Had South properly finessed the heart Q on the second trick, he could then have discarded a diamond on the A, would thus have lost only two diamond tricks and would have been down only one, for a loss of only 100 points, less than the real value of the part score the opponents could have made.

INSTALL CONDUCTRESS.

Mrs. Sarah Case was installed as conductress of the Lady Garfield council, No. 24, Daughters of America last evening when 30 members of the organization met at Eagle hall. Mrs. Esther Beer, deputy, was the installing officer. Mrs. Alice Mae Hunter conducted the business, at which time plans were made for a group meeting to be held at the hall on Feb. 2. Several state officers and a number of out-of-town visitors will be in attendance at that session.

LECTURER DISCUSSES SOUTHERN NEIGHBOR

Tells Mansfield Federation of Women About Cities; Products, Attire; Another Program Planned Next Week.

ATTRACTIVE hand-made costumes lent a South American atmosphere to the Women's Club yesterday morning in spite of the chilly atmosphere when half-a-dozen young Mansfield women modeled South American attire for Mrs. Thomas P. Ahrens who spoke before the Mansfield Federation of Women. Her lecture consisted mainly of a description of the west coast of South America.

Contrary to the opinions of many of us, Mrs. Ahrens pointed out to her audience that much of the South American climate, particularly the Andes region, is temperate and even cold, and the clothing worn by the Indians is wool or heavily padded silk.

"South America offers great contrasts, for although the Indians in the mountains are much as their ancestors were centuries ago, the cities are as modern and sophisticated as ours," the speaker said. She continued to describe ing the geography and history of the countries.

The products are as diversified as the climate, including such things as Panama hats—which are made in Ecuador not Panama—tagua nuts from which many of our plain, white buttons are made, cocoa, coffee, nitrates and copper, silver, gold and cotton

Mrs Ahrens was brought to Mansfield from the Grace Lines by the Federation. Her home is in Washington, D C, and she has had a background of South America study and travel for her lectures.

The costumes worn yesterday were modeled by Miss Kathleen Sturges, Mrs. Howard Peck, Mrs. J. D Clemens, Mrs. Tom Ford and Mrs. B. B. Drummond.

Luncheon was served at the club house following the lecture. On Thursday of next week Dr. ARthur Walwyn Evans will speak on "What America Means To Me" at the Ohio theater at 11 a. m. Luncheon will be served at the club.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Yes, I can see it," I said at last, "and while I cannot agree with you that it would add materially to the effectiveness of the scene, there is one thing certain: It would not detract from it. Indeed, speaking judicially, and without bias one way or the other, I think it would enhance the effect a little."

I stopped short, and there was distinct uneasiness in Olina's lustrous eyes as she scanned my face.

"Does that mean that you will give me my chance?" she queried a bit melodramatically.

"Not so fast, my dear," I answered. "Even if I decided to give you the role, I cannot promise that Mr. Vereitzen will accept my decision: he guards access to his ranks most jealously."

"I don't think you need hesitate on that account," she said confidently. "I am sure he will give me the chance I crave."

"But not without my approval," I answered, then went on swiftly. "There is also your mother's consent to be obtained. Does she know about this wish of yours?"

"Not unless you told her," Olina said sulkily.

"Then you would better tell her, at once, and ask her permission to go through the scheme, before you speak to Mr. Veritzen about it," I said, carefully skirting any bertayal of the fact that Olga and I had talked of Olina's desire for a role in the play.

"I'll tell her the first chance I get," she said, "but I don't believe she'll object. But — I thought — couldn't you?" — she stopped, confused.

"You mean," I said, "couldn't I tell Mr. Veritzen what you wish, and ask him to give you the role, telling him that I am willing to write it in for you?"

"Yes, that is what I meant," she said, and her eyes were fixed uneasily upon my face, over which I purposely had drawn a mask of sternness.

"I can do those things," I said slowly, "and I will do them, under certain conditions."

Her lips were suddenly stiff and dry, and I knew that she anticipated what was coming.

"Look here, my dear," I began in the same manner that I would have used to Mary or Marion, "there are certain things which I must say to you now, and to which I wish you would listen calmly."

"I — will — listen," she said slowly.

"You can be happy—or unhappy—in the future," I began. "At present you are a bit warped mentally, but I realize as well as anyone that there is plenty of reason for that because of what you have endured. But your mother has been through as much as you, and she has preserved a wonderful spirit and outlook upon life."

"But even though you have suffered much, though not as much as your mother," I went relentlessly on, "there is no excuse for some of the things you have done. For instance, that trick you tried to play on your mother in your conversation with Mr. Veritzen."

Here face was suddenly aflame.

"What trick?" she queried defensively.

"You know very well," I answered; "planning to have Mr. Veritzen surprise your mother with a call, knowing that at that hour in the morning she would not be dressed to receive visitors. That was not worthy of you, Olina."

The red in her face deepened to the ugly hue of brick.

"Does Mother know?" she asked quickly.

"You already know she knows," I replied shortly.

"Of course you told her," she retorted.

"I told her Mr. Veritzen was coming," I said "but I did not need to tell her about the trick you had planned. She had overheard you, and she said that she thought you were planning, in the American vernacular, to 'put one over on Mother'."

Auxiliary Elects Mrs. F. J. Gosser as President at Re-Organization.

CRESTLINE—Organization of the board of Emergency hospital auxiliary was effected at a meeting held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. A. G. Holcker. All former officers were re-elected and are as follows: Mrs. F. J. Gosser, president; Mrs. A. C. Kindinger, vice president and Mrs. Otto Sutter, secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Gosser presided for the meeting.

Plans were made for a rummage sale to be held the first part of February, a definite date to be announced later. The group also decided to divide the membership of the auxiliary into working commitees for each month. These committees will be announced by the president.

The report of the treasurer was given and listed a balance on hand of $123.50.

REVIEWS STUDY BOOK

CRESTLINE—Herbert McNeal reviewed the chapter, "A Study of Political Leaders and How to Control Them," from the study book, 'How to Be a Responsible Citizen," at the Young Men's club meeting Thursday evening in their club rooms in Weaver's hall.

Following the review the subject was discussed in general.

The president, Ralph Muntis, who presided for the meeting, announced that Dr. Harris as representative of the state board of health would give an illustrated lecture on social diseases at a special meeting of the club to be held Wednesday evening Jan. 24. Members of the Hi-Y and other boys of the Junior and Senior classes of the high school are to be invited guests.

"Cold weather comes on gradually and your body gets used to it after a time. Summer also comes on gradually and the same holds true there," Wright explained.

"I haven't had a cold, a sore throat or any other sickness during these three years."

Wright's day starts with a cold water bath at 4 a. m. He has a hearty breakfast each day and then for a half hour, coatless and hatless, he takes a walk with his dogs. He has two, a setter and an airdale.

While at work as crossing gateman for the Pennsylvania railroad on East Fourth street, Wright is attired in the same scanty clothing except he takes off his shoes and goes barefoot.

He walks shoeless through the snow to put up the lanterns at the crossing at night.

He doesn't keep the stove running full blast on these cold days while in his shanty. He keeps the fire banked, only because the next shift man isn't a cold weather fiend, he says.

"I take a lot of kidding, but when I know my ideas on living are a benefit to my health, why shouldn't I keep right on going just like I am?" he asks.

Make Them Work and You Solve Our Troubles, Patterson Tells Manufacturers.

"eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

"I was shocked to hear the president say some time ago that 'what is democracy but the rule of the majority.'

"Democracy is the only form of government that provides for the rights of the minority, and only in a democracy are the full rights of the minority not in power preserved."

Patterson developed his second point, discipline, by picturing conditions as he saw them in leading European cities on his last tour abroad. In it he stressed the shocking crime statistics of the United States as compared with those nations abroad.

"There are ten times as many homicides in Chicago in one year as there are in all of England," he said.

"Why," he asked, "should this be? Some contend it is because newspapers here print too much crime news, but this argument has been shot full of holes many times. In London a murder gets much more space in the papers than here and yet London doesn't come close to our crime record. Some say there are too many loopholes in our court system.

"I suspect the difference lies in education. From the kindergarten up, children here are taught to be gentlemen. In England from the start, a child is taught the enforcement of the law is his responsibility.

"Our problem is to teach youth to accept self-imposed discipline."

In his discussion of devotion to an idea or ideal, he said the greatest thing a person can learn is that he has come from somewhere and is going somewhere."

"Somehow if we can get across that life has a meaning, if we can get across personal responsibility for corporate action, we will have accomplished much."

Patterson was introduced by W. J. Russell, Westinghouse engineer, who served as toastmaster at the dinner. Merrill W. Manz, factory manager at the Ohio Brass company and retiring president of the Manufacturers association, presided.

Hines Named President.

Cloyd A. Hines, president and general manager of Farm Tools, Inc. was announced as the new president of the association. Directors named were Robert Lamb, Tappan Stove company superintendent; S. Glenn Vinson, president of Ideal Electric company; George W. Stephens, president of the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company; C. L. Van Derau, factory manager at Westinghouse, and Manz.

Van Derau, who is president of the Chamber of Commerce, of which the Manufacturers association is a division, emphasized the growth not only of the chamber but the city in the past 20 years.

"Mansfield is one of two cities of the United States that has doubled its population in the last 20 years," Van Derau said. "Its industries have spent $877,000 in the past year for expansion. It is really on the upgrade and the industries are playing a major role."

Van Derau announced that a member would attend the chamber's annual meeting Feb. 9.

Among those introduced by Russell were John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce; Mayor William J. Locke; Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton; R. M. Calene, president of the Retail Merchants association; J. S. Cairns, president of the Mansfield and Shelby Foremen's club; C. H. Knisley and J. H. White, members of the Ohio Industrial commission, and Don K. Martin, secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers association.

Rev. Hayes M. Braker pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, pronounced the invocation.

MAKES FINDINGS AGAINST CITY

Examiner's Audit Criticizes Gasoline Purchases, Lauds Kelley.

er Municipal Court Clerk Allen K. Ports, now serving a one to 10 year term in Ohio penitentiary on a charge of embezzlement.

The report released by Ferguson did not include an audit of municipal court, a special report was made after the discovery of a several thousand dollar shortage in the accounts of the former clerk.

A similar finding of $112.18, all of which has been repaid, was made against John Hess, former bookkeeper in the sewer department, and Republican central committee chairman, who was replaced by former Mayor Claude M. Hunter in 1938.

The report said 12 water and sewer accounts ranging in amounts from $1 to $20.50 were paid to Hess, but that no record of the amounts had ever been made or the money deposited in the city treasury.

Zook's report said Hess declared his "complete ignorance" as to how the collections had failed to be accounted for and repaid the amount within four months.

The report scored the board of control, holding that there was "no excuse" for failure to comply with the law in the purchase of gasoline and oil for city cars and trucks.

"Throughout the entire period covered by this audit the city has paid the prevailing retail price for these commodities despite the fact that major oil companies allow quantity discounts when gasoline and oil are purchased on a contract basis," Zook said.

He cited purchases made by neighboring cities which he said were saving an average of 2½ cents a gallon on gasoline, pointing out that the city by purchasing the fuel on a contract basis could have saved $870 on the purchase of $5,800 worth of oil and gasoline during the audit period.

The report again called attention of the board of control to the expenditure of funds in excess to $500 without contract for insurance to cover city property. It was recommended that at the expiration of the present policies that new insurance be purchased only upon contracts awarded after advertising for bids.

THEATERS

"Comedie Francais."

AUGMENTED with the scenic effects and cast of Productions Francais, Ltd., Count Berni Vici's new French musical "Comedie Francaise" opens today on the stage of the Ohio theater for a two-day run. There will be four shows today including the midnight presentation at 11:30 p. m. It is heralded as the most pretentious roadshow on tour and features 70 continental artists with 48 girls and introduces for the first time in Mansfield the Balinese half-caste, Yvette Dare, with her "sacred" parrot in "Dances of Bali." "British Intelligence" is the moving picture which is being shown at the Ohio Saturday and Sunday. Boris Karloff and Margaret Lindsay play the leading roles.

Well-Known Story Portrayed.

The animated cartoon once again comes to the fore with the showing of "Gulliver's Travels," a lavish technicolor production which opened today and runs through Tuesday at the Madison theater. This unusual production has been in work at Miami, Fla., for nearly two years, representing the efforts of several hundred skilled artists, and was budgeted at just twice the cost of the ordinary "big" motion picture. The story comes from Jonathan Swift's great classic of a shipwrecked seaman's amazing adventures in the faraway land of "Lilliput" the land where everything—people, buildings, scenery—is one tenth the size of its counterpart in the everyday world.

* * *

"The Rains" Return.

The second engagement in Mansfield of "The Rains Came" will be at the Ritz theater Sunday and the following two days. This emotional drama, made from the Louis Bromfield best-seller, had its world premiere in Mansfield last September and was shown here for a week at that time. Last week Film Daily announced it as one of the "honor roll" films of last year. Starring in this spectacular film are Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy, George Brent, Brenda Joyce, Joseph Schildkraut and Maria Ousepnskya. "The Jones Family in Quick Millions" is the supplementary feature.

* * *

Exciting Stories Unfolded.

"Hell's Kitchen," the dramatic picture which opens Sunday and runs through Monday at the Majestic theater presents the "Dead End" kids in a brand-new type of roles. The "angels with dirty faces" have all the sympathy on their sides in this one, for they are shown as the brutally treated inmates of a so-called shelter for boys. How they reform the reform school and incidentally, an ex-gangster as well, forms the novel plot of this show. Preston Foster and Ann Dvorak are co-starred in "Cafe Hostess" in the second feature.

* * *

Comedy Stars Gleasons.

Eight comedians, representing as many different types of screen humorists, go through their stuff in the hilarious comedy, "The Covered Trailer," starring the Higgins Family which opens Sunday and runs through Tuesday at the Park theater. James Gleason heads the list as the long-suffering father of the family. Then there's Lucille Gleason, the blundering wife; Russell Gleason, the good natured but naive son; Harry Davenport, wise and lovable scamp; and Junior, the brat. The second feature is "Thunder in the East" with Charles Boyer and Merle Oberon as the leading players.

New Philadelphia Takes Advantage of Misplays to Halt Mansfield, 41 to 32, for Ninth Victory.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

FAILURE of the Tygers to halt the long range artillery of the championship-ambitious New Philadelphia Quakers cost them a chance to stage one of the biggest upsets of the current cage season on the Mansfield high school planks last night.

Coach Vern Hoffman's courtiers bowed to the undefeated Quakers by a 41 to 32 score, but it could have been a Mansfield victory just as well.

Another Tyger fault that contributed greatly to the New Philly triumph was sloppy ball handling. Mansfield not only lost the ball frequently with bad passes, but also by poor dribbling.

It cannot be denied that the Quakers are of championship caliber, but it would not have been impossible for the Tygers to halt the invaders' long winning streak had they performed more smoothly.

New Philly started off in the lead with long shots, and obtained a rather comfortable advantage in the opening quarter before the Tygers started rushing the Quaker tosses.

* * *

Mansfield staged two gallant comebacks, once in the second period and again in the third quarter. But the Tygers' attack bogged down both times when they came in sight of the lead.

* * *

The Tygers never led once, but shared a tie on two occasions early in the first stanza. Then Bill Barker started slinging from the side of the court and he dropped three beauts through the bucket in the first frame to help New Philly gain a 13 to 5 lead.

Miller

New Philly at one time held a 19 to 9 advantage in the second quarter, but Jack Shiplet sparked the Tygers in a drive that netted nine points in the latter part of the frame. The visitors were in front by a 21 to 18 count at the intermission.

Going into the third period only three points in the rear, the Tygers needed only two baskets to take the lead, but the pair of field goals never came until the Quakers had extended their margin to 27 to 18. The period ended 36 to 28. Gene Miller contributing seven of the 10 points scored by the Tygers in this quarter.

The bengal courtmen attempted to pull the game out of the fire in the final quarter, but they lost the ball continually without getting shots as they tried to handle the ball faster than was possible.

It was a rough-and-tumble ball game that was enlivened by many pile-ups in which players came up with their fists drawn on several occasions. A total of 25 fouls was called.

* * *

Miller, Mansfield forward, was the high point man with six field goals and three free throws, and he was followed by Barker and Castignola, who led the winners to their ninth consecutive victory with 12 points apiece.

* * *

Trailing 18 to 14 at the end of the third period, the Mansfield reserves staged a spectacular rally in the closing minutes to defeat the Raemelton Farms, Friendly House league leaders, 26 to 22, in the preliminary game. Romano and McGinty, with eight points apiece, led the junior Tygers.

Masked Marvel Added to Show

The Masked Marvel, who has yet to meet defeat on the Mansfield wrestling pad will go against one of the roughest individuals he has yet met here in the special semi-final on Monday night's world's championship show in the Armory.

Charley Layden of Ft. Wayne, Ind., a stocky Irishman, who'll slug at the hat of an eyelash, has been signed to match brawn and wits with the mysterious masked matman.

Announcement of the action of Heywood Allen of Louisville, Ky., head of the Midwest Wrestling association, in ordering Billy Weidner to again defend his title here against the Great Mephisto was well received by mat fans. Allen criticized the judgment of Referee Miller and announced that Miller would not be allowed to officiate this match.

Butler Refuses To Lose Games

Keeps Promise to Coach By Halting Lexington; Rams Move Up on Idle Bluejays.

WHENEVER Coach Bob Burgett of Butler high hears of someone breaking his New Year resolution he can grin and point to his fast-improving court athletes.

Those youths, with only one victory to their credit before 1940, promised Burgett they wouldn't lose another game this year.

And the way they are performing at present it doesn't look like they intend to let their coach down. Butler has won three in a row.

The Bulldogs' latest conquest came last night when they dusted off the Lexington Minutemen, 36 to 23, in a Richland county league tussle at Butler.

Butler's triumph enabled it to jump into fourth place in the circuit race. Last December Butler was in sixth.

De Nero Leads Rams to Win at Ontario.

MADISON high whittled a half-game off unbeaten Bellville's lead in the Richland county basketball league race last night by whipping the Ontario high warriors, 33 to 24, before some 400 fans on the Ontario court.

Coach Al Fendrick's charges, fighting to retain their hold on second place in the circuit title chase, grabbed the lead in the second quarter and never trailed.

* * *

With Doug DeNero back at the pivot point, Madison, after being held to a 6-6 tie in the initial frame, broke loose with a 13-point scoring spree to take a commanding lead. DeNero had been ineligible the past two games because of scholastic difficulties.

* * *

DeNero collected 14 points to pace the Rams as they went into a 19 to 14 lead at halftime. Madison was sporting a 26 to 21 advantage as play opened in the final period.

Mentor Orv Kibler used a number of inexperienced athletes in the contest and was enthused with their performances. Henry Hager, regular center, led the Warriors in the scoring column with 10 tallies.

The Madison reserves made a clean sweep of the cage card by stopping the Ontario seconds, 21 to 17, in the preliminary contest.

Last-Minute Basket Wins for Lucas.

A LAST-MINUTE basket by Gilliland enabled the Lucas Cubs to edge a surprising Union high quintet, 25 to 24, in a Richland county league scrap on the Union hardwood last night.

Lucas, which gained undisputed possession of third place by virtue of the victory, was behind 23-24 when Gilliland came through with the game-winning goal.

* * *

Mentor Jim Hunter's proteges came from behind to knot the score at 20-all at the end of the third quarter, and after they moved ahead in the fourth frame it looked for a while like they would score an upset.

* * *

The Cubs held a 5 to 3 advantage in the opening stanza, and were still leading by a 16 to 10 count at the intermission

Curry, Union guard, was the offensive star of the evening with 10 points, with Franks and Martin of Lucas topping their club with seven markers each

A pair of free throws by Bob Hahn in the third overtime gave the Union seconds a thrilling 25-23 win over the Lucas reserves in the prelim.

MT. VERNON and Ashland continued their sizzling pace in the battle for first place in the North Central Ohio conference race last night by registering lopsided victories.

* * *

The Ashlanders, led by Vince Barr, chalked up their fourth conference triumph by swamping the Shelby high Whippets, 43 to 17, at Ashland, while the Yellow Jackets trounced Galion, 59 to 43, on the Orangemen's court. It was Mt. Vernon's fifth league win and its ninth consecutive victory of the season.

* * *

Barr collected 21 points to pace the Ashlanders, who were ahead from the opening gun. Bob Lehman's high-scoring center, who has averaged around 16 points a game, saw his total slip last night when Bob Bear held him to three markers.

Shelby, which lost a thrilling overtime contest to the Mansfield high Tygers Tuesday night, found it almost impossible to halt the fast-breaking Ashland attack. Numerous times the Ashland players slipped under the basket for easy shots. Ashland led, 18-7 at halftime.

* * *

Paced by Capt. Bill Crumrine, who tallied 19 points, Mt. Vernon led from the opening minute. The Yellow Jackets were holding a 27-21 advantage at the rest period. Givens of Mt. Vernon, and Secrest, Galion pivot man, scored 17 points apiece.

The Presidents of Marion Harding walloped Bucyrus, 38 to 28, in the other conference contest at Marion. Hudson was high-point man with 13 tallies. Marion was ahead, 15 to 6, at halftime.

Clair Bee 'Dalton' Gets Breath In City

"We'll break down a defense this way," Clair Bee, right, famous Long Island university cage coach, was telling a former protege, Earl McMullen of Mansfield, when The News-Journal cameraman snapped this photo. Bee, who was a coach at the high school in 1925 and 1926, stopped off in the city to get a "deep breath," as he explained, on a scouting trip.

* * * * *

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

DICK DALTON visited the old "home town" yesterday, spent a few hours renewing old acquaintances and then hopped off for Lansing, Mich.

It was Dalton's first visit to Mansfield in many, many years.

"But it hasn't changed much," Dalton said as he repeatedly walked to the frost-covered window in his room on the seventh floor of the Mansfield-Leland hotel and peeked over the sky-line.

Dalton, however, has changed a little. His hair is grey around the temple, but he looks little older than he did 'way back in 1925 and '26 when he was an assistant to Coach Russ Murphy at Mansfield high school.

But he has gone a long way since leaving Mansfield high. Today Dalton is considered the No. 1 cage coach in the country.

You guessed it . . . Dick Dalton, in this instance, was Clair Bee, coach of the spectacular basketball teams of Long Island university, Brooklyn.

* * *

But, wait a minute, Clair Bee was Dick Dalton once upon a time. How about it, football fans? Remember back in the early 20's when he came to Mansfield and set the city on fire with his football playing? Semi-professional football fans do.

* * *

Bee arrived in Mansfield shortly after he was married. He needed a job badly and the one way to get that check for groceries, he thought, was through football.

Then THE football team in the city was the Steel Mill club. Clair asked for a trial with the team. "Nope, you're too small," he was told.

But he was a persistent fellow. He got a chance. His first game was against Massillon. Bee played an end and knocked "Fats" Fothergill, later a star outfielder with the Detroit Tigers, down so often that he was immediately given a steady position on the team and a job at the steel mill.

"They moved me to the backfield later," Bee remembered, "and I never had an easier job in all my life. With all of those big fellows in front of me, I couldn't help but gain ground." He coached and played with the old Liberties the next year, if you remember.

But this doesn't explain Dick Dalton. To make a long story short, Bee adopted the name of Dalton. He used it to keep his wife from learning that he was playing football. Where did he get the name? Out of a wild west story, of course.

So there's the story of Dick Dalton, which is much better known to Mansfield grid fans than Bee.

The busy Bee was able to make a brief stop in Mansfield because of his basketball duties. Last night Clair, accompanied by one of his former Mansfield high proteges, Earl McMullen, went to Wooster to scout Duquesne, a future Long Island foe.

He left later for Lansing, Mich., where he will see another future Long Island foe, Michigan State.

Bee, Harry Mehock's predecessor as track coach at Mansfield high, is rated most successful cage mentor in the business today. He coached at Rider college after leaving Mansfield, and went to Long Island about eight years ago.

There he constructed the greatest basketball dynasty ever in existence. His Blackbirds won the national championship last season and, over a period of years, registered 42 straight victories until beaten by Southern California several weeks ago. This is the only defeat on the Birds' record this season. "We lost to the same team which we beat 33 to 15 yast year," Bee moaned.

* * *

"Give me big men and I'll teach them to make baskets," he said. His ability to make stars out of ordinary players is envied by every coach.

* * *

But Bee didn't want to talk about Bee. "Whatever happened to 'Ruts' Seymour and the other fellows?" he asked. "I'd certainly like to see them."

And Clair did. Before he left for Wooster, Bee and Earl took a run around town and visited briefly with a number of the old Mansfield high athletes whom he worked with while here.

Score Eighth Home Victory

New Haven Jackets Trim Greenwich, 23 to 15.

NEW HAVEN — New Haven high's Yellow Jackets scored their eighth straight home court triumph here last night by thumping Greenwich, 23 to 15, in a Twin-Valley league contest.

The New Haven triumph gave the team sole possession of second place in the circuit race. Shiloh, the pace-maker, and Plymouth, which holds third place, were idle last night due to a diphtheia epidemic in the two schools.

* * *

With Kipp leading the attack, New Haven gained a one-point advantage in the opening frame and kept adding to it. The Yellow Jackets led, 7-6, in the initial quarter, 13-8 at the half, and 22-10 going into the final stanza. Kipp scored eight points.

Orville Steven's free throw in an overtime gave the New Haven seconds a 14 to 13 win over the Greenwich reserves in the prelim. It was the third consecutive overtime victory for the New Haven club.

Willie Coggin Coast Threat

Meets Bryon Nelson Today In 'Frisco Match Play.

SAN FRANCISCO —(INS)— Big Willie Coggin of San Francisco, who has swept two of the top contenders out of his home town's tenth annual $5.000 national match play open, may be on his way to the golf championship he lost to Willie Hunter in the 1936 finals.

Coggin goes into the quarter-final round today facing Byron Nelson, the National Open champion, after topping two of the toughest hurdles in the pairings yesterday.

• • •

Medalist Lawson Little, winner of this tournament in 1937, and one of the toughest match play golfers on the professional tour, and Clayton Heafner were Coggin's victims yesterday. The San Francisco pro eliminated Little in a morning match, 3 and 2, and gave a repeat performance in the afternoon to waylay Heafner by a like score.

* * *

Nelson, from Toledo, won from Red Francis, Altoona, Pa., 1 up, and from Chuck Klein, Alice, Tex., 3 and 2. Klein had eliminated Al Kreuger of Beloit, Wis., in the morning round, 6 and 4.

Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, N. Y., defeated Rod Munday of White Plains, N. Y., 3 and 2, after winning 4 and 3 from Lefty Stackhouse of Seguin, Tex., in the morning. Munday eliminated Sam Byrd, former New York Yankee outfielder from Philadelphia, 1 up, in his opening match.

RENAISSANCE, SPHAS VIE IN CLEVELAND SUNDAY

Topping the bill will be a professional double-header featuring the return engagement between the Philadelphia Sphas and the New York Renaissance club. The other half of the twin-bill pits the Akron Goodyear against the Detroit Eagles. Punctuating the two-ply feature will be a brief exhibition of ghost basketball.

HOSTS TO BEARS

MINOR CHANGES RULE MARKET

Sustained Retail Activity Cheers Traders; Reports Show Gains Over '39.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Small price changes either way ruled in today's stock market transactions.

Noted by market analysts were the federal reserve figures disclosing the country's department store sales for the week ended Jan. 13 topped the comparable period last year by 4 per cent. The year-to-year gain amounted to 5 per cent in the preceding week.

Sustained retail activity was said to have accounted for the recent heavy buying of textiles in New York's Worth street.

The deceased returned to Bucyrus to visit relatives last summer, after an absence of 40 years.

NATION MOURNS DEATH OF U. S. SENATOR BORAH

Dean of Senate Dies After 4-Day Illness; State Funeral Set For Monday.

velt prefaced a radio address at 10:30 p. m., with a tribute.

He acknowledged that they had differed on various problems, but added that "his purpose and my purpose and the ultimate objective, I think, of everybody in this room interested in the future of America—those purposes were identical."

Plans for the funeral will be completed today when the senate minority and majority leaders, Charles L. McNary (R., Ore.) and Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) confer with Mrs. Borah.

Hundreds of telegrams from the entire country and abroad arrived today with expressions of sympathy for the senator's widow and mourning the passing of the man whose congressional battles were known the world over.

Tuesday morning he was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while in the bathroom. His head struck the edge of the bathtub as he fell. He was found unconscious on the floor by his wife and was conscious for only brief intervals after that.

When physicians examined him they found a concussion at the base of the skull, but that, they concluded, was independent of, and was not the cause, of the hemorrhage.

Weakened Rapidly.

Since Thursday he weakened rapidly. Shortly before his death he suffered a sinking spell from which he never rallied.

Miss Cora Rubin, the senator's secretary, and a nurse were at the bedside when death came at 8:45 p. m. Mrs. Borah was out of the room and arrived shortly afterward.

Dr. Worth Daniels, Borah's personal physician, was summoned but he, too, arrived after the senator had died. When he confirmed Borah's death, Mrs. Borah collapsep in the arms of a friend. She rallied, and was put to bed with two nurses in attendance.

For two decades and more Borah's voice thundered in this nation's senate while other statesmen listened at home and abroad. With Henry Ford and Charles Spencer Chaplin, the untravelled man from Idaho achieved a unique world citizenship which brought an endless parade of callers and petitioners to his door.

Back home the miners, the stockmen, the people great and small, listened to him, too. Every six years they returned him to Washington where he came first in 1907.

He was dean of the senate and at noon next March 4 he would have begun his 34th year of service there.

Fought Many Battles.

Of late his voice had not been as powerful as it once was in the affairs of his state, the nation or the world. But the record stands of the young Idaho lawyer who faced a mob and cowed it in the Coeur D'Alene; of the intra-party battles to make progressivism synonymous with Republicanism; of his part in the successful fight to keep this country out of the league of nations; of his resolution to call the post-war Washington arms conference; of the fine impartiality with which he lambasted every president from Taft through Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The death of Borah stills a penetrating "isolationist" voice at a moment when war again has engulfed much of the world. The fact may have some future bearing on our history.

Borah was a political battler by trade and instinct, but a non-cooperator. He had few intimate friends. For a few years, it is true, he was a member of the Republican national committee, but he learned to say "party means nothing to me." And he meant that, although he never brought himself to bolt a Republican presidential nominee. If he did not like them, he just went home to Idaho and stayed till the votes were counted.

He fought Idaho party bosses to come here and—for a couple of terms—he fought them to remain.

Native of Illinois.

Born in Illinois, educated at the University of Kansas and for a couple of years a lawyer in Lyons, Kan., Borah hoisted his shingle at Boise, Ida., in 1891 and four years later married the governor's daughter, smart and pert Mamie McConnell.

From that beginning, Borah rose in 30-odd years to become one of the world's first citizens.

The story is told that Borah ended his western trek in Boise because he saw a drunken young lawyer attempting to argue a minor case. Borah had never tasted alcohol—never did in his long life—and he concluded that if a young drunk could obtain a case, the Boise field was wide open to a youth with knowledge of the law and an oratorical gift which made him, finally, one of the few public speakers whose platform skill might be compared with that of William Jennings Bryan or Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The maverick instinct was strong in Borah. He joined forces with the progressive Republicans in 1907, and died with the insurgent mark still on him. His first big political role was as floor manager for Theodore Roosevelt in the fight to prevent re-nomination of William Howard Taft for president in 1912. The Roosevelt men failed and moved across the street in a rump convention which named Theodore Roosevelt to head the bull moose progressive ticket. Borah did not go with them. He went home.

There were occasions in later years when Borah was reported to be contemplating a third party movement. But the reports were even less than rumors.

"I never considered joining a third party," he explained some 14 years ago when progressives were rising against President Calvin Coolidge.

But this year might have been different for the old man from Idaho. Sitting on July 24, 1939, in the senate restaurant with this correspondent, Borah discussed 1940 Republican presidential prospects. He said he did not want Vandenberg, of whom he was personally fond, or Taft or Bricker or Dewey and that he would not seek the nomination himself as he did in 1936 in a futile effort to turn the G. O. P. to his way of thinking.

"Party means nothing to me," Borah said over his milk and crackers. "Vice President Garner is a very capable man. I might support him for president if he were nominated and the Republicans named some reactionary."

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, (D.-Mont.) as a presidential candidate probably would have tempted him to bolt.

20,000 REDS HALT RETREAT, TURN ON FINNS

Flight East All But Cut Off, Russians Take New Stand For Bitter Clash.

But from the Arctic ocean to the Gulf of Finland joy welled through the Finnish ranks over official news that Swedish volunteer airmen were taking an active part in bombing and cutting off the retreat of the Russians in the Salla sector.

Swedish Infantry Idle.

Dispatches from the front told of only one Russian division making a stand against the Finns in the brittle cold where the Arctic Circle swings across Finland, but earlier advices said that two divisions, or 40,000 men, were caught in the jaws of Finnish detachments.

Infantry from the Swedish volunteer corps has not yet been thrown into action in Finland.

But Finninsh headquarters in Helsinki, mentioning Swedish activity for the first time, said the Swedes successfully bombed Russian supply columns, while six fighter planes, piloted by Swedes, drove Russian bombers away from the Finnish west coast.

Two hundred Russian planes swarmed over south Finland yesterday, and Swedish volunteer flyers aided in compelling them to turn tail, according to Helsinki announcements.

At times the Russian air armada reached a total of 450 planes, dropping bombs around Helsinki and machine-gunning civilians in the capital and other cities, it was charged.

Further retreats by the Russians were reported from north of Lake Ladoga, while artillery activity alone characterized fighting on the Karelian isthmus.

Official reports in Helsinki said that in the seven weeks' war the Russians lost at least 208 planes, mostly bombers, 434 tanks, 189 artillery guns, 282 machine guns, 522 automobiles and trucks, 63 field kitchens, and 1560 live horses.
